Shopped Sooki

When pressed, you've been known to show a little leg. (Okay, a lot.) Usually, though, the situation (read: sweltering temps, adorability index) warrants it.

No need to cover up all the time.

Or so says Sooki, a capricious new line of summery tops, dresses, and bottoms that are worth playing off the cuff.

Nipped-hem shorts in baby blue, tomato red, and green keep things classy. Ruffled party dresses are all flutter and no cling. Rainbow-striped tanks with molded tops and string neckties hark back to the '70s. (And who wasn't showing skin back then?)

Just slip into the whimsical patterned sundresses, plaid slip dresses, and tunics when you're feeling flustered. You'll be hot stuff all right.

And totally cooler for it.
